TREASURER'S SALE

—OF—

Seated and Unseated Lands and Lots

—IN—

Cambria County,

—A. D. 1892—

I, CHAS. J. MAYER, Treasurer of Cambria county, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in pursuance of the several Acts of Assembly in said Commonwealth directing the time and manner of selling unseated lands for taxes, do hereby give notice that the following tracts of unseated lands and lots of ground in said county of Cambria, or such parts thereof as may be necessary to pay arrearages of taxes due thereon for one year or more, will be offered for sale at the Court House, in the borough of Ebensburg, on the SECOND MONDAY, being the 13TH DAY OF JUNE NEXT,

and continue by adjournment from day to day until the whole be sold for such arrearages of taxes and costs necessarily accruing thereon:

Unseated Lands.—1890 and 1891.

THE CRANKY MAN.

Short and stout or lean and lanky,
Russian, Prussian, Pole or Yankee,
For a man who's cross and cranky
We've no use.
Though from pity we endure him,
Or from friendship try to cure him,
He's a nuisance we assure him,
And a goose.

Snapping, snarling, scolding, scowling,
Glaring, grunting, grumbling, growling
Hating, hitting, hissing, howling,
Always he
Is the most unhappy person
That was ever laid a curse on,
Fact there isn't any worse on Land or sea.

Wife and children fear to meet him,
Friends, if any, cease to greet him,
Strangers with aversion treat him;
Smallest things
Vex and irritate him till he,
Mad with passion, wants to kill; he
By his childish actions, silly
Laughter brings.

Never music is he hearing,
Never beauty is appearing
To his eyes; no fun that's cheering
Does he know.
Hating self he hates his brothers;
All the joys of life he smothers,
Lone, forlorn, apart from others
He must go.

He's a nuisance and he knows it,
And his face unhappy shows it,
But the cranky fellow owes it
To himself.
For he lets his temper rule him,
And life's petty troubles fool him;
Now we'll lay him—just to cool him—
On a shelf.
—H. C. Dodge, in Goodall's Sun.

BARBARA'S CHANCES.

Her Decision in the Face of a Great Temptation.

"What a selfish, heartless world this is!" murmured Barbara Blake to herself, as she sat by the window, mending with deft, delicate stitches the holes in old Mrs. Dickinson's silk hose. "Here I am, a girl of eighteen to whom gayety, amusement and sunshine would seem as natural as the fall of the dew; yet I am cooped up in a gloomy, brownstone house, the mere shadow of a cross, exacting old woman, whose wants are never satisfied. Companion, indeed!" as she broke off the needleful of silk floss with a snap. "I am anything but that. Drudge, menial—machine, if you please—but nothing like a companion. And all to earn a paltry living! Oh, dear, why cannot people live on flowers and fresh air, as the humming birds do? Why is it necessary to toil so for bread to eat and clothes to cover us? It does seem to me as if life were all a failure!"

Ever since she had risen from her bed that morning she had been at Mrs. Dickinson's beck and call.

Mrs. Dickinson was not always in an amiable mood. There was hot water to bring up for her bath—it must be steaming from the kitchen, and the old lady would trust no one but Barbara to carry it, because, as she said, the servants were so careless and spilled it on the stair carpets.

Just then the door softly swung open, and in tripped a bright, pretty damsel of two or three and twenty, in a coquettish fall hat trimmed with scarlet poppies and bows of cherry velvet, and a beautiful jetted mantle.

"Clara!" cried Barbara, nearly upsetting the work basket in her surprise and delight. "How came you here?"

"In spite of the edict: 'No followers allowed?'" laughingly retorted Clara Belden. "My dear, I ran the blockade. I bribed the housemaid, and crept up the stairs as softly as a mouse. Don't be alarmed—the ogress is snoring with forty-woman power."

"How beautifully you are dressed, Clar!" said Barbara, with admiring survey. "You have got a situation at last?"

Clara nodded, and adjusted a glittering new silver bangle on her wrist.

"A good one," said she, emphatically. "I'm in the company of the Cecelian theater," explained Clara. "We are supposed to be singers, but our voices don't signify a pin. The Cecelian takes pride in its chorus being the handsomest girls in town. And you are pretty, Barbara, you know very well—prettier than I am, if you would only give yourself a chance. I could make a first-class beauty of you! And it's only the evenings, you see, with an hour or so at morning rehearsal, and a matinee once a week—and it's such fun. There's one young man in the audience who has thrown a bouquet to me every night for eight nights running. And there are suppers and breakfasts, and all that sort of thing."

Involuntarily Barbara drew back.

"But, Clara—is it right to—"

"Right! Oh, you silly little goose, why not? There's Mrs. Dowdin, the bandmaster's wife, to chaperon us, isn't there? And she's an old woman of fifty. Oh, I assure you, it's a very select company indeed. Sixty dollars a month, and your salary raised if you do well. And when I heard that there was a vacancy, I thought of you the very first thing. I knew you had a nice mezzo-soprano voice, but, as I said before, that don't matter so much, as long as you are so pretty. A brunette, too—we have an overplus of blondes already. And I knew, also, that you were only getting fourteen dollars here with an old martinet for a commanding officer. Come, am I not a good friend to you?"

Still Barbara looked with questioning eyes at the handsome, voluble girl. Could it be possible that this self-possessed, beautifully-dressed woman was Clara Belden, her classmate at school, and only a month older than herself?

Sixty dollars! Yes, it was kind of Clara—it would indeed be an outlet of escape from this wretched, grinding bondage of her daily life. Sixty dollars, with suppers, bouquets, admiration unlimited. Barbara drew her breath with a gasp. It seemed almost too much to realize.

Just then Mary, the housemaid, tiptoed into the room, with her finger on her lips.

"Miss Blake," said she, with a sidelong glance of admiration at the showy visitor in her silks, bangles and "breath of roses," "the ould lady is afther wakin' up as cross as two sticks. An' she says you've forgot her morning tonic and Bijou's collar is too tight, and —this way, miss, pl'aze," as Clara rose precipitately. "It's as much as me place is worth for Mrs. Dickinson to know that Miss Blake had company unbeknown to her! Run quick, pl'aze, Miss Blake—I can hear her scolding now!"

"Never mind, dear!" encouragingly whispered Clara, as she rustled by, leaving an odor of frangipanni in her wake; "the odious shackles will soon drop off. Send me a line at once. Mr. Dowdin can't wait!"

Mrs. Dickinson had never been so irritable, so hard to please, as she was that day. Or, at least, so it seemed to Barbara.

But there was an exultant thrill in the girl's heart.

"It need not be for long," she told herself. "I will write immediately and accept Clara's kind offer."

But nevertheless a certain regretful feeling kept pulling at her heart strings. She remembered how her gentle, soft-voiced mother, in her lifetime, had always distrusted Clara Belden's assured manners and dashing ways. She recalled to herself that mother's efforts to keep her in the modest retirement of the home circle, her constant precepts against brushing off the soft bloom of true womanhood, and conscience told her to reject the tempting offer.

"But I am so young!" she pleaded with herself. "And I have seen so little of pleasure and variety. I am such a drudge! No one cares for me here; and perhaps, if I went to the Cecilian I might attract some true heart. Even if Eugene Dickinson were to see me dressed as Clara dresses—but no! Eugene never would go to a place like the Cecelian. Of course it must be respectable, or Clara would not belong to it. But—oh, no! Eugene would never go there."

In an instant she comprehended. She would be lowering herself in her own estimation by accepting the tempting bribe. She would be cutting loose from all the traditions of her youth. And yet—

She sprang suddenly up, and threw back the masses of soft chestnut brown hair from her forehead, with both hands.

"No!" she uttered aloud—"never!"

Almost at the same moment she heard Eugene Dickinson's voice in the next room, talking to his aunt.

"Yes," said he, quietly. "I think you are right. I think she deserves it at your hands."

"She has worked very hard," said the old lady. "She is very patient and sweet-tempered. I've seen tears come into her eyes once in awhile, but I can't call to mind that she has ever lost her temper, or spoken a word of complaint."

"The patient Griselda," said Eugene, softly.

"Yes, exactly that. The patient Griselda. So I have made up my mind to adopt her as my daughter, and get some one else to do the work. We'll travel and go everywhere. I want her to see the world. I somehow feel conscience-stricken that a young thing like Barbara should have grown up so much in the shade."

"I don't think, though," slowly added Eugene's gentle, leisurely voice, "that your plan is quite feasible."

"Not feasible! Why not?"

"Perhaps because it conflicts with a plan of my own."

"A plan of your own! My dear boy, do explain."

"The fact is, Aunt Adriana," said Eugene, "I have lost my heart to this sweet-voiced, sweet-natured companion of yours. I want to ask her to be my wife."

Mrs. Dickinson was silent a moment; then she spoke again, in an altered accent.

"I wonder this never occurred to me before," said she.

"It was not so very unlikely, was it?"

"Not in the least. But, Eugene—"

"Yes, Aunt Adriana."

"Why need my plan conflict with yours?"

"I don't think I quite understand you, Aunt Adriana," said the young man.

"You are already my adopted son. I wish to make her my daughter. Very well. This is a big house, and I individually occupy very little of it. Why can't I have you both?"

Barbara had sat there with both hands clasped over her burning face. Was she an eavesdropper? If so, the fault was unintentional. Now she hurried away, almost believing herself to be in a dream. Surely, surely this could not be true—this lifting of the curtain of trial and toil—this clear shining of a new life?

But as she passed the parlor door it opened and Eugene Dickinson met her face to face.

"Miss Blake!" he exclaimed. "You are the very person I have been wishing to see. Will you honor me with a few minutes of your time?"

Clara Belden was at her evening toilet, with a surrounding of mirrors, rouge pots, darkening pencils and highly scented pomades, when Barbara's brief note of declination reached her.

"What a fool!" said Clara. "Reach me that nail polisher, Jane. But, at all events, she's had a chance."

But Miss Belden did not know what other "chances" Barbara Blake had had.—The Home Queen.

A FEW ART NOTES.

HENRY S. KITSON, the young Englishman, who has been selected to make a statue of Farragut for Boston, is only twenty-eight years of age.

SIR FREDERICK LEIGHTON has consented to act as chairman of the fine arts section of the royal commission for the Chicago exhibition.

MISS HARRIET HOSMER, the sculptor, is to receive $25,000 for her work "Queen Isabella of Castile," which is to be unveiled at the opening of the women's department of the world's fair.

ROSA BONHEUR has finished the largest animal picture ever painted. It is called "Le Depiquage," and represents ten horses, large as life, trotting over the thrashing floor still used in parts of southern Europe. She has declined $60,000 for the picture.

A Skillful Flatterer.

Bob Van Slyck called on a Madison avenue family, in which there were two old maiden sisters of about fifty years of age. Van Slyck is an old friend of the family, and one of them being in a bantering mood said:

"Mr. Van Slyck, which of us do you think is the oldest?"

Van was in a dilemma. He did not like to hurt the feelings of either. He looked from one to the other, and asked:

"You want me to say which of you two girls is the oldest?"

"Yes."

"Neither of you looks older than the other. Each of you girls looks younger than the other."—Texas Siftings.

STAR-EYES.

The Pathetic Story of an Indian Boy.

The beautiful valley, called by the Indians Otzinachson, and known to us as the west branch of the Susquehanna, was the last foothold in Pennsylvania, east of the Allegheny mountains, that the Indians abandoned. Long after the outposts of civilization had advanced far up the valley the red men tarried by the graves of their ancestors. They were loath to leave the clear waters of the river, encased in the fruitful little valley that was hemmed in by hills and mountains. Well they knew that the time was drawing near when inexorable fate would compel them to turn their backs on their old homes and trudge towards the setting sun, but they dreaded to make the change.

The time came, however, when the westward movement was almost imperative. It was decided that the tribe should migrate to the headwaters of the stream, fully fifty miles beyond the limit of white settlement. But a few friendly Indians, who were on the best of terms with the whites, refused to heed the command of the chiefs to move westward. This bred vengeful feelings on the part of their kindred.

The advance line of civilization at this time was the mouth of Lycoming creek, now within the limits of Williamsport. At the base of the mountain lived a young friendly Indian named Fleet-Foot, who made a fair living by hunting and fishing, assisted by the handiwork of his young squaw, who made handsome baskets that were sold to the settlers.

Both Fleet-Foot and his wife Minnawaqua (Sparkling Water) were remarkably fine types of the Indian of those days, but they had a little papoose that was a wonder and a delight to all the whites in the sparse settlements. Even the fondest mothers admitted that he was just the sweetest little thing they ever saw—with the exception of their own children, of course. He had great, big, laughing hazel eyes, half-rosy cheeks, a nose that a sculptor would have adored and the cunningest little mouth. He was very appropriately named Star-Eyes.

Little Star-Eyes was about two years old when the tribe migrated to the new location far up the river. Angry threats had been made against Fleet-Foot because of his refusal to join them, but he was happy and contented, and Minnawaqua dreaded the thought of leaving her white friends.

One day, shortly after the migration, Fleet-Foot was hunting in the mountains. Minnawaqua left her wigwam, a solid structure of logs, which the whites had helped to build, to go to a spring for water. She had left Star-Eyes playing on the floor, but when she returned in a few minutes the child had disappeared. She hastily looked about, called him, and then hurried out of the house to renew the search.

She had hardly passed the door when she stopped, turned pale and pressed her hands to her heart. Her keen native instinct detected strange moccasin tracks on the ground. Her mind comprehended it all as she sunk fainting to the ground. Star-Eyes had been kidnaped by his kindred in revenge for Fleet-Foot's refusal to join them; that was evident.

There was a great commotion among the settlers when they heard of the dastardly act. Many of them were eager for immediate pursuit of the captors, but Fleet-Foot dissuaded them by saying that the Indians would surely kill the papoose if they found that they were followed, and besides there would be danger of ambush by a large party of Indians.

About ten days after this episode, just before daylight in the morning, Fleet-Foot and Minnawaqua were suddenly awakened by the voice of Star-Eyes at the door, crying bitterly. In a trice the child was in the arms of his overjoyed parents, but they were surprised to find him tremblingly feeling their faces with his hands. What was the matter? He always spoke in English.

"Star-Eyes tan't see."

True enough, he was totally blind, although the big, lustrous eyes looked just as natural as on the day he was abducted. Fleet-Foot understood it all. The tribe had wreaked their vengeance by blinding the innocent child and then stealthily returned him.

The settlers were wild with rage when they heard of it. Some of them were eager for an expedition against the Indians, but cooler counsels prevailed.

Among the settlers were a Quaker family from Philadelphia, who had taken a special interest in Fleet-Foot's little family. Part of the Quaker family, including the mother, were about to make a journey to the city to visit their friends, and it was suggested that Minnawaqua and her blind child should accompany them in order that the latter's eyes might be examined by an oculist and treated if there was any prospect of restoring the sight.

It was a tedious journey in those days on horseback all the way to Harrisburg and thence by primitive stage coach, but it was accomplished, and the little blind papoose was taken to an eminent oculist. Examination showed that the eyes had been blinded by holding close to them, with the lids opened, a very hot object, probably either a red-hot iron or a super-heated stone. It was not the first case known of such Indian atrocity.

The oculist did his best to repair the vision but all he could accomplish was to restore just sufficient sight for the child to distinguish between light and shade. He could distinguish persons only by their voices.

Ten years passed and the line of settlement reached further up the valley. The kind Quaker family moved a dozen miles above to the mouth of Pine creek, and Fleetfoot, with three children in addition to the nearly blind boy, determined to move westward with them. It was difficult for the Indian, even with the help of Minnawaqua in basket making, to earn a living for his little family. There were white hunters in the woods now and game was getting comparatively scarce. Even after the removal to Pine creek the Indian was sorely pressed by poverty and he soon determined, though with great reluctance, to join his tribe at the headwaters of the river, nearly forty miles away.

It was a sad parting. Minnawaqua, with all the stoicism of her race, could not repress her grief, and tears trickled from the beautiful but nearly sightless orbs of Star-Eyes, now a handsomely framed youth of fourteen years. And there were moist eyes, too, in the Quaker's family and in the households of the other settlers.

It was in the autumn following the spring when Fleet-Foot joined his tribe. Rumors had been rife all summer that the Indians were in ugly mood and that a raid down the river, to sweep away the advanced settlements, was imminent. The consequences was that the settlers were fully armed and prepared to quickly muster all the men within a dozen miles along the river.

Just at daylight one morning the Quaker's family was awakened by a violent pounding on the door. On opening it they were amazed at finding Star-Eyes there in most pitiable plight. He was weak and haggard; his buckskin clothing was almost in shreds; there were only remains of his moccasins, and his feet were bleeding terribly.

He quickly told his story. The Indians were on the warpath up the river. After the war party started he instantly took to the woods, made a long detour in the mountains, running at his best speed all the time, and then struck the river below the advancing redskins. His imperfect sight had caused his clothing to be torn to tatters by underbrush, and his moccasins had worn out in that almost perpetual run day and night for forty miles. He thought the Indians would surely reach the settlement the following night.

The alarm was quickly sounded along the valley. A good force of brave men hurried up to meet the savages, and to take a good defensive position. But their services were not needed. When the Indians found that their approach had been heralded, and that the settlers were ready for them, they abandoned the raid and retreated.

Star-Eyes remained with his Quaker friends. About two weeks after the events just noted he and two of the Quaker children were gathering nuts in the woods. Suddenly there was a small volley of rifle shots, and poor Star-Eyes fell dead in his tracks without word or groan. The other children were unharmed.

This was the awful retribution visited upon the nearly sightless Indian boy for saving his white friends from slaughter.

Within an hour after the dastardly act of assassination a dozen brave settlers were on the trail of the murderers, five in number, as indicated by their tracks. The long strides showed by the moccasin tracks showed that the assassins were running, and that they were determined to make sure escape. But the pursuers were swift runners, too. Nerved by their gratitude to poor Star-Eyes, and by the horrible atrocity of the Indians, they were determined to avenge the crime at any hazards.

As evening approached the pursuers found that the trail was getting "warm"—they were nearing the culprits. Sundown, twilight, and the trail still warmer. As the tracks grew distinct, and when fully twenty miles of distance had been covered, one of the men saw a glimmer of light in a little valley some distance ahead. It was evident that the Indians, believing themselves now safe from pursuit, were camping for the night.

A careful reconnoissance, a patient wait of three hours under the glimmering stars, a cautious advance, the simultaneous crack of a dozen carefully-aimed rifles at close range.

Four of the sleeping Indians never awoke; the fifth one helplessly writhed in agony. As the settlers rushed up to dispatch the wounded redskin the light from the camp-fire fell upon his face and they suddenly stopped as if they had been riveted to the ground.

It was Fleet-Foot, the father of Star-Eyes!

The muzzle of a rifle was at his head and a finger on the trigger. His eyes turned up sadly; he recognized the settler, raised his hand and faintly said:

"Yes; but listen." They knelt beside him to catch his words, for he was evidently dying.

"When the war party returned," he said, slowly and painfully, "they knew, of course, that Star-Eyes had betrayed them. They bound me, Minnawaqua and my three young children together, intending to burn us all. One of the Indians, with one or two chiefs, knew that we knew nothing about the going of Star-Eyes. In the end there was a compromise. Five warriors, including myself, were to go to the settlements and kill Star-Eyes. I was obliged to accept the terms to save Minnawaqua and my three little ones. You know the rest."

"And you were one of the murderers of your own boy?" excitedly exclaimed the settler that covered him with the rifle.

"No," came faintly from the dying Indian. "I might shoot myself, but not Star-Eyes. There was no bullet in Fleet-Foot's rifle—I deceived them."

Suddenly he raised his head, turned his already glassy eyes toward the twinkling stars, pointed his finger upward and said:

"There is Star-Eyes now! Do you see him? He is beckoning to me. I must go to him!"

Then his head fell back, his lids dropped—he was with his boy.—Philadelphia Times.

Engineers as Marksmen.

Engineers of railroad trains in Texas and most of the far western states carry revolvers, and often rifles, in their cabs for various contingencies that may arise. They amuse themselves by shooting at the telegraph poles or any other mark while running at full speed and attain a wonderful skill in marksmanship. A few days ago an engineer on the Denver & Rio Grande railway shot and killed a wildcat near [illegible] from the cab of his locomotive.

A Mountainous Island.

The island of Formosa is about two hundred and seventy miles long and one hundred and forty wide. Ranges of mountains extend from the [illegible] the southern portion. Some of the peaks are quite lofty, Mount Morrison being twelve thousand feet high, and all are volcanic. Every little while there is a rumble in the center of one of the peaks and the whole island is convulsed. The climate is fair, [illegible] such disturbances, the thermometer rarely getting below forty degrees.

Notice to Democrats.

To the Democrats of Cambria county.

Please take notice that those desiring to become candidates for the nominations for the several county offices at our coming June primary election will be required to meet in Ebensburg on Monday, May 23, 1892, for the purpose of arranging for the printing of tickets and defraying the expenses incident to such primary elections. All persons desiring to become candidates as aforesaid are cautioned to be present or to be represented at said meeting; otherwise, under the rules, their names will not be printed upon the tickets.

CHARLES M. SWANK,
Chairman Democratic County Committee.
Johnstown, Pa., April 18, 1892.

KING HUMBERT, of Italy, has been tendered the resignation of all the members of his cabinet.

THE House passed the river and harbor bill by a vote of 186 to 65. It carries appropriations of $26,000,000.

BETWEEN horse-racing at Washington and the "fences" at home members of the House find it extremely difficult to remain in their seats.

MRS. PRESIDENT HARRISON has been very seriously sick for the past three weeks, and, although recovering, is not yet able to leave her room.

To tax the whole people that one class may thrive seems to be a strange principle of taxation in this country, but that is the theory of a high tariff.

IF the Louisana farmer gets two cents a pound from the government for raising sugar why not give the Pennsylvania farmer ten cents a bushel for raising potatoes.

AT a conference held at Washington on Monday night at the residence of Senator Don Cameron, by the Republican leaders who are opposed to the renomination of President Harrison, it was decided to put up Senator John Sherman of Ohio, for the purpose of defeating Harrison. The followers of Quay in this state will now know who they are for.

THE final meeting of the Johnstown Relief Commission was held at Philadelphia on Tuesday. The amount remaining in the treasury, about $35,000, was distributed, $10,000 going to the new Johnstown Memorial Hospital. About $13,000 was divided among sufferers whose claims had been allowed, but whose money was delayed, pending a final adjustment.

SECRETARY LANGLEY, of the Smithsonian Institution, has been experimenting for some time past with fire-flies from Cuba. He says thet the light they give is the "cheapest" in the world—produced, that is to say, with the least heat and the smallest expenditure of energy—and he believes that a successful imitation of it would prove a most profitable substitute for gas and electricity.

PRINCE RUSSELL, the son of Benjamin, while in New York last week took the occasion to say that Secretary Blaine is "broken down mentally and physically." Even if true it comes with a bad grace from the house of Harrison and the friends of Blaine who aver that their favorite is now in the enjoyment of good health and vigor feel like running their knife under the Harrison ribs for the young man's verdancy.

THE proceedings of the fourteen Republican state conventions held last week leave scarcely any doubt that President Harrison will be renominated at Minneapolis by an overwhelming vote, in spite of the intrigues against him. His strong position is due alike to the activity of his army of office-holders, marshaled by Secretaries Foster and Elkins, and to the fact that his opponents have thus far utterly failed to bring an available candidate into the field.

WHEN we find railroad brakemen employed by the Cambria Iron Company, a corporation that has been enjoying for years the contributions forced from the people by a high tariff, getting $1.13 per day, it is about time to take in the sign "Protection to American industry." The protected industries are thriving and growing fat but when it comes to paying wages they pay only what they can get men to labor for. Protection, in so far as it benefits the laborer is a greater swindle than the Louisiana lottery and far more dangerous.

ON Monday John A. Harris, D. J. Dimond, Willard Johnston, Thomas Herrington and Owen Gallagher, a committee representing the Cambria Iron company trainmen, at Johnstown, awaited on General Manager C. S. Price and asked for an increase of wages. Owing to the benefits conferred on the workingmen by the McKinley bill and which enables protected industries to pay mammoth wages these men were getting $1.13 per day and strange to say, were not satisfied. The general manager after hearing their complaint discharged them for belonging to a trainmen's union.

THE Attorney-General of the United States, says the Philadelphia Times, has opened an aggressive battle against the leading trusts of the country, and has very properly begun with the sugar trust. The authority for his action is the Sherman anti-trust act that was evidently intended to prevent just what has been accomplished in controlling the prices for most of the common necessaries of life.

The sugar trust that lately swallowed up the immense establishment of Mr. Spreckels of this city, probably more flagrantly violates both the spirit and the letter of the act of Congress than any other business combination made in this country; and as it effects the value of one of the few commodities universally consumed by the people, there is eminent fitness in making a test case with the sugar combine.

The administration has begun none too soon to suppress the logical fruits of the McKinley tariff bill. It is the foundation of monopoly; it protects capital and oppresses labor; it increases the cost of the necessaries of life to workingmen and lessens both their employment and their wages: and the murmurs which have come up from every side clearly indicate that the industrial voters of the country will not sustain any party, or sanction any policy, that invites monopoly for the benefit of the few and increase taxes to oppress the many.

It would have been much wiser to have passed a reasonable protective tariff, but since the people who paid spot cash in 1888, to insure special taxes for their individual benefit, have coerced a most infamous tariff policy, the only thing left for the president and the attorney-general is to make a general raid against the trusts and combines which have been created and fostered by the new tariff policy of the administration.

HENRY GEORGE'S "Protection or Free Trade," says the Pittsburg Post, is one of the books of this generation on political economy that is most read. As our readers are aware, by a combination of seven congressmen introducing parts of it in their speeches, the whole book has been printed in the Congressional Record. The single taxers are happy. Under the federal statutes parts of the Record are furnished as "extras" at the cost of printing, and being now part of the Congressional Record, this entire book may be had for one cent. Mr. Thomas G. Sherman of New York has contributed 100,000 copies, and Congressman Johnson of Cleveland, who is wealthy enough to afford it, has given 1,000 for a second 100,000. In addition to this the single taxers all over the country are rallying for the work of putting $1,000,000 copies of the book into the hands of the people. The Republicans are somewhat exasperated. It is a book that is steadily increasing is circulation, even at its lowest price of 25 cents, but now that it can be had for one cent there will be no end to the demand for it. Apply to any Democratic congressman for one, a hundred or a thousand copies.

THE tin plate liar, says the Philadelphia Herald, goes on with his falsifications as gaily as if he wasn't being exposed at every turn he makes. He is working for campaign effect and is not going to allow such a trifle as being proved a liar to interfere with what has been cut out for him to do.

One of the latest productions of his mendacity is the story he set afloat some weeks ago that the American tin and terne plates made in the nine months ending March 31, 1891, amounted to 5,240,000 pounds. But since this fabrication, the tin plate circular of C. S. Trench & Co., of New York, the heaviest dealers in the country, shows that during those months the out put of American tin plate was but 1 per cent. of the importation, equal to but three days' consumption, and that most of even this small amount was not real American tin, the black plates having been imported and dipped in tin that was also imported.

This sort of infant industry has already cost the American people $15,000,000 in the increased price of tin.

THE entering wedge for free ships, says the Pittsburg Post, was the bill that passed Congress the other day authorizing American registers to be issued to two British-built steamers of the Inman line. If that company is to be favored, why not others? If it is wise to authorize our capitalists to buy two ships where they can be bought cheapest, why not let them buy a dozen? Heretofore the only two things Americans were not allowed to purchase abroad and import were obscene books and ships. Ships are now acknowledged legitimate merchandise, and it will not be long before authority will be given to purchase them without restriction, and with this will come the revival of the American shipping interest. In 1856 80 per cent of the American foreign trade was carried on American vessels. Now it is only 12 per cent. Our antique navigation laws have driven the American commerce from the ocean.

THE House committee on elections at Washington on Tuesday decided that Shonk, the Republican sitting member in the Pennsylvania contested election case of Reynolds vs. Shonk, is entitled to his seat. Twelve members were present and all but two of them voted in favor of Mr. Shonk. Mr. Doam, of Ohio, Republican, and Mr. Lawson, of Georgia, Democrat, the other two members present, did not vote, as they had not fully considered the case. Argument was begun in the Alabama contest of McDuffie vs. Turpin, immediately after the vote in the Shonk case.

SENATOR SHERMAN seems to have reconsidered his refusal to every enter the field for the presidential nomination. He has intimated to a Chicago man that he would not refuse if offered the prize, and, singularly enough, the Chicago man believed him.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 7, 1892. Mr. Harrison would be perfectly happy if he knew that the "bluff" sent out by his friends this week about the certainty of his being nominated on the first ballot at Minneapolis was based upon anything more substantial than wind. I have it on good authority that it has been extremely difficult for the men who are managing the Harrison campaign to keep him from making public a statement that he will not accept a renomination, so disheartened has he become over his prospects. But his trainers, to use sporting slang, have determined that he shall not withdraw, and in order to bolster up his failing courage they got up that table showing that he will be nominated on the first ballot.

The anti-Harrison Republicans, in and out of Congress, realizing that the Minneapolis convention is only a month off, are getting more active than ever. Secret conferences are of nightly occurence here, and they are confident of defeating Mr. Harrison. Their present policy is to encourage the friends of every possible candidate, trusting to being able at the last minute to solidify all of this scattering vote for their candidate, whoever he may be.

Speaker Crisp wishes his friends and admirers to know that he fully appreciates the honor conferred upon him by the invitations he is constantly receiving to visit different places, but as he regards it of the highest importance that he should be in his place in the House until the day of adjournment, he is compelled to decline all invitations. It would be a pleasure to him to accept them all, but he places duty far above pleasure.

Secretary Foster, in answer to a House resolution, has admitted that warrants and requisitions upon the treasury amounting to $5,655,866 were presented during February and "held up" until March. He pleads in extenuation "press of other business." This charge which was made by Democratic members of the House and by others has been persistently denied by Republicans in and out of the Treasury department. The Secretary's statement shows how much dependence can be placed upon Republican denials.

The Attorney General's office has virtually been forced by the attitude of Democratic members of the House to order the U. S. district attorney at Philadelphia to begin an action against the notorious sugar trust. This was not done until the House Judiciary committee had decided to report favorably Representative Scott's resolution, calling upon the Attorney General for information as to whether the sugar trust had violated the Sherman anti-trust law, and whether any prosecution had been instituted against it, which was promptly adopted by the House.

Commissioner Raum is truly unfortunate in having his veracity constantly doubted. This week Capt. Charles A. De Armand testified before the House investigation committee that Raum swore to a falsehood concerning his application for a pension which Raum had rejected for spite. Representative Enloe is certainly not alone in his opinion of the truthfulness of Raum, although no one else has been quite as unparliamentary in their language.

The best that the House could get out of the Senate on the Chinese question was amendments to the old law providing for one year's imprisonment of every Chinaman detected violating the law; the registration of Chinese now in this country and denying them the right to bail pending the decision of cases under writs of habeas corpus; and they had to fight hard to get that much, as the Republicans wished to restrict the legislation to a renewal of the old law which had proved its worthlessness in many respects. The amendments will remedy the worst defects of the old law, and if the administration chooses it can now stop Chinese immigration, either through Canada or any other source.

Few people who have followed the evidence taken by the House committee engaged in investigating the pension bureau have any doubt as to what the verdict will be. Guilty as charged, will certainly be the report the committee, which will undoubtedly recommend the dismissal of Commissioner Raum for mismanagement and general inefficiency. It is doubtful, however, whether Mr. Harrison will have backbone enough to dismiss Raum on the eve of the national campaign. Secretary Noble may find himself in danger of impeachment if he persists in his refusal to allow the committee to examine the papers relating to the dismissal of certain special pension examiners.

The House Commerce committe propose to look into the Reading coal trust, with a view of recommending Congressional action. The Democrats in the House are not afraid of trusts, if a member of the cabinet is one of the big stockholders in it.

The House will probably pass the River and Harbor bill, which is now considering, this week.

One Hundred Miles an Hour.

Angus Sinclair, the railroad expert who recenty rode in a very dangerous position on the engine hauling the New York Central's Empire state express, for the purpose of making steam tests, thinks there remain but two things to perfect in order to secure regular travel between New York and Philadelphia, for instance in an hour and a half or less, or New York and Albany, 143 miles, in an hour and three-quarters. These two things are, first, an absolute reliable and sufficient system of signaling, and, next, a road-bed and rails brought to a higher degree of perfection than has yet been secured even on the best roads. Motive power is almost perfectly developed, according to Mr. Sinclair, and when the demand for fast trains is sufficient to justify the increased cost which more perfect roadbeds would entail, perfection will also be gained in this direction.

A Serious Cyclone.

MORRILTOWN, Ark., May 9.—A severe cyclone passed southwest to northeast, near this place, at six o'clock last evening, accompanied by a heavy rain. Reports have come in this morning showing that two persons were fatally injured. The track of the storm was in some places a mile wide, and timber, fences and out buildings were prostrated.

The greatest damage was done to the Catholic monastery, Marienstadt, three miles north of here, where the church and monastery buildings were destroyed. They were valued at $12,000. Near there Matthew Brill's house was blown down and he and his children received injuries thought to be fatal.

—According to official reports from Russia, the condition of the growing crops and the prospects of successful harvest are unfavorable. In a majority of the central governments winter wheat and rye suffered greatly from drought, frost and snow, while an extensive area has been left untilled through want of seed corn. On the other hand, from the districts of the Caucasus watered by the Zolga and from Bessarabia, together with the whole of Southern Russia, satisfactory reports have been received.

Good Luck Comes Too Late.

DENVER, May 9.—A striking example of "what fools these mortals be," and how easily men can be unnerved by bad luck, came to light here. Last Wednesday a brief account was published of the suicide of Charles S. Clute, who had come west with the usual idea of accumulating a rapid fortune, but who had fallen into the lot of many an overconfident youth who leaves comfort and friends in the east under the hallucination that gold is to be picked up in Colorado without the usual grind of labor and patience.

Two days after the suicide there came a letter from New York state addressed to Mrs. Clute, the dead man's young wife. In it was contained the statement that Mr. Clute had just fallen heir to a small estate, and that $8,000 in cash awaited his order. It came, however, too late. Late last night the remains were shipped to the deceased's old home in Troy, N. Y., accompanied by Mrs. Clute.

Terrible Torture.

SAN FRANCISCO Cal., May 9. Shanghai newspapers contain accounts of horrible tortures inflicted upon the Chinese accomplices of Mason in his foolish rebellion against the Government. The representatives of all the foreign Governments have protested against these atrocities. The victims were only hired by Mason and did not realize their crime or punishment.

The legs and arms of three of them were broken with bamboo sticks. Paper was burned in their faces till the skin fell off to make them confess. They were hung up by the thumbs and whipped and allowed to hang until unconscious. Arms and legs have been destroyed forever. Other cruel punishments were visited on them and death resulted in many cases.

Wall Paper Booms,

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 9.—A colossal scheme for the amalgam ation of all the manufacturers of wall paper in the country was revealed here yesterday. There are thirty-two firms engaged in the industry and there invested capital is from $18,000,000 to $20,000,000. Ninety per cent. of the capital represented is said to be pledged to the support of the scheme. The new combination is much on the line of the American Tobacco Co., and the same attorneys who engineered the Standard Oil monopoly have the legal formation of this trust in charge. The only manufactrers of prominence who refuse to go into the trust are M. H. Birge & Sons, of this city. Five hundred traveling men will be thrown out of employment by the trust.

An Indian Outbreak Feared.

GUTHRIE, O. T., May 11.—Governor Seay to-day received dispatches from the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservation, stating that about 100 Cheyenne Indians were off their allotments and had driven a number of people out of county F. These Indians claim they never signed the treaty for the sale of their lands, and that the whites must get out of the county inside of ten days or be driven out. The Indians are all armed and are acting very ugly.

At the town of Cheyenne a line of guards are kept about the town night and day, and the people desire that troops be sent to protect them at once. A large number of Indians refuse to come to the agency, and unless they are controlled at once serious trouble will surely ensue.

The Millionaire's Remains Brought Home.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The remains of Mr. William Astor, who died suddenly in Paris on April 26, arrived in this city this morning. The widow, her daughters, Mrs. Orme Wilson and Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton, and her son-in-law, Orme Wilson, accompanied the remains and were met in this city by John Jacob Astor, Jr., and her son-in-law, J. Roosevelt. At 9 o'clock the ladies entered closed carriages and were driven to the Astor home. The remains of the millionaire were later conveyed to West Twenty-fifth street and placed in the mortuary in Trinity chapel. The funeral services will be held in Trinity chapel next Thursday afternoon.

Miss Caldwall Very Ill.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Miss Mary Gwendolen Caldwell, who is reputed to be the wealthiest unmarried woman in America, is very ill in this city with typhoid fever. It is thought the disease was caused by drinking the water of Florida, as Miss Caldwell has just returned from a winter residence in that State.

Miss Caldwell's fortune is estimated to be about $10,000,000. She is a devout Catholic, having given liberally to Catholic charities, and endowed the Catholic University in Washington to the extent of $500,000. She has been decorated by the Pope with the Order of the Golden Rose. Miss Caldwell was engaged at one time to Prince Murat, of France, but the engagement was broken off.

A Trip on a Snow Slide,

SEATTLE, Wash., May 11.—The warm suns of the spring time are starting the usual snow slides and avalanches in the Cascade and the Olympic mountains. From Sultan city, a mining camp in the Cascades, northeast of this place, a curious sight is reported. The men at work in the Silver Top tunnel heard a noise, and, rushing out, found a vast snow side coming down the mountain, not 300 yards away. In the middle of a mass of snow ten rods wide by a quarter of a mile long were five bears and 14 mountain goats. The avalanche plunged over the bluff, and the whole managerie except one bear, was buried under the debris.

Heroism of a School Marm,

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., May 11.—Miss Lida Davis, a teacher in the Ravenswood school, took her pupils out for a picnic, and in returning Dana Holland and Sherley Haropls fell into Lick run, a swoolen and swift stream. Seeing that the little fellows were sure to be drowned, Miss Davis jumped into the stream and saved them both. She had a hard struggle, twice sinking with one of them, but being a good swimmer she saved them both.

News and Other Notings.

—Eight hundred men of various labor organizations at Decatur, Ill., are on a strike.

—The house committee has agreed to report favorably the bills appropriating $100,000 for the extension of a free delivery in the rural districts and providing for the issue of fractional notes.

—The bones of Jumbo, Barnum's big elephant that was killed a few years ago at St. Thomas, Canada, weighed even 2,000 pounds. The total weight of the body, bones and all was six tons.

—Carnegie's coke plant at Douglass station, on the Pemickey branch of the Lake Erie road, was in full operation on Monday. The plant has 100 ovens, and it has been idle since last summer. Over 100 more ovens are are to be added to furnish coke for the big concern.

—William G. Hitchcitel, a farmer aged 50 years, living near Collegeville, Pa., called his wife into a room where he was seated in a chair on Monday night, and then in her presence drew a butcher knife across his throat. He died soon afterward. The man was temporarily insane.

—John Brunell, a French Canadian serving a thirty years' sentence in Concord, N. H., state prison for the murder last Christmas of John C. Wheeler at Findge, is endeavoring to starve himself to death. He has eaten no food since he has been in the prison, some three weeks, and declares it his fixed purpose to partake of no nourishment whatever.

—A bolt of lightning struck Julius Kuppion who was driving along the road to his home in Norwood, Pa., on Friday, killing him and his horse instantly. At Kennet Square, several carriages were blown over in the street by the force of the wind, their occupants narrowly escaping injury. At Westgrove a number of buildings were damaged including a large casket factory, which lost its roof.

—John Fox, employed by the Pottsville Iron and Steel Company in the construction of a bridge on the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's extension, had a narrow escape from drowning on Monday. He was prying a beam with a bar at the highest point of the bridge when the bar slipped and he was precipitated to the ground, a distance of 50 feet, striking on his head. Strange to relate the man arose to his feet and in five minutes was again at work.

—At Reading on Thursday of last week a tigress belonging to Forepaugh's show attacked her keeper, Lawrence W. Scott, and would have chawed him to death but for the timely assistance of a resident of Reading, who fought the animal back with a pole until Scott succeeded in getting out of the cage. He was taken to a hospital and his wounds stitched up. Twenty-five stitches were required. The tigress was furious and roared and clawed viciously.

—Farmer Harry Roeder, residing near Summit station, Schuylkill county, accidentally shot and killed his 12-year-old son a few days ago. Roeder had taken a gun out to destroy a crow's nest near his barn, but it would not go off. Returning indoors he proceeded to examine it carefully to ascertain the cause of its failure to shoot, while the boy stood watching him. In some unnaccountable way the piece was discharged and the entire load entered the boy's abdomen. He fell dead at his father's feet.

—There was excellent sleighing at Cheyenne, Wyo., on Monday, snow having fallen to the depth of a trifle more that six inches. The injury to range stock by the severe weather of December last and the late storm is appalling. The losses are estimated at over thirty per cent. Owners say the calf crop will scarcely be worth branding. On the other hand, sheep having received personal care, have thriven. The loss is less than five per cent, and fleece will be heavier than ever with good lamb crops.

—2,000,000 postal cards a day are required to meet the demands of this country.

—Miss Mollie Shryock, of Wilmore was visiting her sister Mrs. Fes Lloyd, this week.

—J. Charlesworth died at his home in South Fork on Friday last from typhoid fever.

—Hon. L. D. Woodruff, of the Johnstown Democrat, paid Ebensburg a short visit on Monday.

—The treasury of Huntingdon county is empty and there is a bonded indebtedness of $105,617.

—Professor Gant has a new tonsorial artist from Westmoreland county employed in his barber shop.

—Ex-Commissioner Joseph Hogue, of Allegheny township, spent a few hours in town on Thursday.

—Mr. Bernard Litzinger, one of Loretto's enterprising business men, drove up to Ebensburg on Thursday.

—An infant son of George Isenberg, formerly of this place, died in Altoona on Thursday of last week.

—Miss Maggie O'Neil, who has been absent for several months in Pittsburg, returned home on Wednesday.

—Mrs. P. A. Schwab, of Altoona, was here on Tuesday visiting her son, who is a pupil at Mt. Gallitzin Seminary.

—The citizens of Lilly are making a move in the right direction and will soon commence the erection of water works.

—Mr. John G. C. Bearer, of Susquehanna township, was here on Tuesday on his way home from a trip on the railroad.

—John McClarren, of Croyle township, who was taken to Dixmont last week died on Monday. He was about 45 years of age.

—The county commissioners have three voting booths erected in their office in the Court House for the inspection of voters.

—Governor Pattison has had a rather remarkable streak of judicial luck. In a little over a year he has appointed eight judges.

—A Pennsylvania railroad policeman brought fourteen train-jumpers to jail on Monday. They were arrested at Conemaugh.

—Mr. David Davis, a former resident of Ebensburg, but now one of Morrellville's prosperous merchants, visited Ebensburg on Monday.

—The Pugh place on the outskirts of the borough, where Samuel Reese met his untimely end, has been purchased by Dr. T. J. Davison.

—Kate Lewis and Mabel Maron were brought up from Johnstown on Wednesday to spend thirty days in jail for running a tippling house.

—Joseph Brady, supposed to be Clearfield county's oldest citizens, died a few days ago at his home in Brady township, in the 95th year of his age.

—Miss Mary Roberts, daughter of Mr. C. T. Roberts, who has been absent all winter visiting friends in the eastern part of the state, has returned home.

—James Lynch, an old resident of Johnstown who lived alone in a shanty, was found dead at his home on Saturday night about 11 o'clock by his neighbors.

—Anderson Weaver, of Lewistown blew in the muzzle of his gun to see if it was loaded. It was, but Anderson has no further use for the gun—he died instantly.

—Contractor Charles McFadden, of Philadelphia, passed through here on Monday on his way to visit the scene of his contract on the new railroad near Carrolltown.

—Mr. A. W. Buck, of the firm of Johnston, Buck & Co., was taken ill on Tuesday and had to give up business for the day. He is now all right and able to be about again.

—On Monday work was commenced by the street commissioner and a force of men on Julian street. The application of broken stone will be a big improvement on that thoroughfare.

—The P. R. R. corps of engineers are now at work making a survey of the route from Bradleys to the Blacklick, crossing the Carrolltown plank road at the foot of Hughes' grade.

—Our neighbor the Herald on Saturday last received a brand new Country Campbell power press, and as a matter of course, is feeling proud over this valuable acquisition to its establishment.

—Mr. James Beiter, a former resident of Bennington, but now of Loretto, where he and his brother carry on the undertaking establishment, formerly owned by Mr. S. Fry, was a visitor to Ebensburg on Tuesday.

—A pocket-book containing about $54 was lost on the road between Cresson and Loretto on Saturday, April 30th. The finder will be suitably rewarded and can learn who the owner is by calling at this office.

—Day Express killed an unknown man at Sang Hollow on Monday morning about 10 o'clock. He was walking on the track and failed to see the approaching train until it was upon him. He was frightfully cut up and could not be identified.

—Mr. Albert Williams, of Homestead, Allegheny county, Pa., who was badly burned at the explosion in the mill of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., at that place, about two months ago, is able to be about again and is visiting relatives in Ebensburg.

—An exchange says one of the best cures for membraneous croup is to cover a cloth thick with lard and upon the lard spread a thick coating of Scotch snuff; then apply it to the patient's neck. The cloth should extend from under the chin to the collar bone. Paste this in your scrap book.

—The Benedictine Brothers at Carrolltown have a fine fish pond on their premises near Carrolltown which is well stocked with fish. A few nights ago some person or persons exploded a charge of dynamite in the pond, killing a large number of fish. It is said that there is a clue to the identity of the perpetrators of this act of vandalism and that they will be made pay dearly for it.

—On Tuesday afternoon several cars standing on the Hollidaysburg branch railroad at the Seventeenth street bridge, Altoona, started down the grade, which is heavy, and in rounding a curve at Margaret avenue, jumped the track, and striking the one-and-a-half story house of John Dixon, utterly demolished it, the car passing through it and across the garden. The loss is about $600. Luckily no person was in the house at the time.

—Miss Julia Deasy, of this place, was visiting friends in Pittsburg this week.

—The Johnstown Tribune of Saturday, noted the fact that Mrs. Priscilla Oatman, of Conemaugh, was seriously ill. Mrs. Oatman was formerly a resident of Ebensburg.

—Dr. Porthero, of Johnstown, will have charge of the race track of the Ebensburg Agricultural Society during the coming summer and will commence training a number of fine horses next week.

—Mrs. Mary Jane McMorris will offer at public sale a very desirable hotel stand in Tunnelhill borough on Wednesday, May 25, 1892; also a house containing six rooms. See advertisement in another column.

—Clinton county has an 80-year-old citizen, one Jacob Deise, who recently cut sixty-three mine props twenty-eight inches at the top, peeled one, and one-half tons of bark in three weeks, walking a distance of three miles every day.

—Mr. Joseph Horner, who for number of years kept hotel in Wilmore, died on Friday last, aged about 70 years. He leaves a wife and several grown-up children. His remains were interred in St. Bartholomew's cemetery at Wilmore on Sunday.

—J. C. Hassaft, of Baltimore, while engaged in superintending the construction of a tunnel on the Beech Creek railroad, near Kermoor, Clearfield county, was struck in the back by a falling stone which fractured the spinal column. He was removed to his home.

—Good roads cannot be built for nothing: they cannot be maintained without intelligent supervision. But wherever they have been constructed they soon pay for themselves twice over, putting two or three dollars in the farmer's pocket for everyone they take out.

—Samuel Miller, of Adams township, jumped from a moving train at South Fork on Wednesday morning, and falling on his face was badly scratched. Mr. Miller is an old man but young enough to learn that jumping off a moving train is a very dangerous proceeding.

—The break in the arch at Dishart's fill on the Cambria & Clearfield railroad, reported in last week's FREEMAN, was much more serious than we supposed. Instead of taking two or three days to repair the damage, it will likely take several weeks and cost from $5,000 to $10,000.

—Quite a number of our citizens have received letters within the past few days from New York containing green goods circulars. People who read the papers never get caught on baits of that kind, but occasionally some one too stingy to take and pay for a paper sees the rare chance to make a fortune and gets left.

—A Hungarian who was standing watching the laborers at the new bridge at the east end of the tunnel near Bennington, on Saturday was struck by the derrick falling and received injuries which caused his death a few hours afterward. He was buried in the Amshouse cemetery in Blair county on Monday.

—Henry Sell, administrator of Jeremiah Pergin, will sell at public sale on the farm of the deceased in Jackson township, one mile from Munday's, on Saturday, May 14th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., one bay horse, 1 good set of harness, 1 set buggy harness, 1 one-horse spring wagon, pole and neckyoke, lot of hay, bedstead, corner cupboard, sleigh, old iron, etc.

—Some farmers in northern Berks county who refused sixty to eighty cents a bushel for their potatoes last fall, in expectation of obtaining still higher prices, are now selling them at sixteen to nineteen cents, while others are giving them away if parties are only willing to take them. In other cases farmers are hauling them on their fields to rot. Some have several hundred bushels on hand.

—On Sunday a fight occurred in an Italian tenement house in Altoona in which a tough named Pinkey Marks figured as one of the principals. Knives and clubs were feely used and Joe Patre, who figured in the capacity of a peacemaker, was struck on the neck by a brick and instantly killed. No one can be found who saw the fatal missile thrown. Investigation showed that Patre's neck was broken.

—Two men giving their names as H. W. Keith and J. H. Devore, and residence at Altoona, were arrested in Brisbin, Clearfield county, on Friday night, for passing counterfeit money. Among their belongings were found thirty-one counterfeit $5 bills, in addition to a half dozen or more of the same denomination that they succeeded in getting changed at as many barrooms in the course of the evening. They were lodged in the Clarfield jail the same evening.

—Another illicit still was captured by revenue officers, near Somerset, on Wednesday. The still was discovered several days ago by an officer while searching the mountains back of Trent for the murderer Pritts. It had been dismantled and was concealed in a clump of bushes about a half mile from Pritts's home. Officer Schlosser says that the capacity of the captured still is not less than 180 gallons, and he believes it to be the largest unregistered still ever captured in the United States.

—It is said that trains will be running on the Cambria and Clearfield railroad about the middle of June. What would be the matter with getting up an excursion trip from Ebensburg to Hastings, say about Saturday the 25th of June, for the purpose of seeing the country along the Chest Creek. We could leave in the morning, take dinner at Hastings and return in the evening. Editor Kaylor, of the Hastings Tribune and Squire Anna, would each look a little after the party and see that all were safely loaded on the cars for the return trip. Talk it over with your wives and sweethearts and let us make it a go.

—The United States Grand Jury in Pittsburg on Friday found true bills against the Rev. Wm. H. Dill, the Clearfield bank president, for embezzlement; Theodore Myler, the ex-assistant postmaster of Allegheny, same charge, and James Kinley, for making counterfeit coin. Mr. Dill's offenses consist in the alleged embezzlement of two cashier's due bills on June 9th, 1891, amounting to $5,625.07 and $5,000 respectively; a note made by Putnam & Crockett on June 26th of $1,500; one by the same makers on August 22nd, of $1,000; one made made by the Caledonia Lumber Company on July 22nd, amounting to $1,500, and one made by Putnam & Crockett on September 28th, of $2,000. There are two charges against Mr. Dill—one for embezzlement and one for falsely certifying to checks and notes. The case arises out of the failure of the Clearfield and Houtzdale banks.

The Cambria Difficulty

The refusal of the Cambria Iron Company to listen to the grievances of their trainmen may result in a serious difficulty for the company. Five more Union men have been discharged from the company's service under the "iron-clad rule" No. 8. It is also believed that all members of the various Unions and Brotherhoods will be gradually weeded out.

What action the grand officers of the organizations, to which the discharged men belong, will take is not yet known, but the men are confident that their action will be supported by their organizations. This will cause a general strike of the crews of trains ordered to carry the Cambria freight and will put the company to serious inconvenience, if, indeed, they have not eventually to yield to the men's demand.—Johnstown Democrat.

Who Killed McClarren?

John McClarren, of Croyle township, who was taken from the jail in this place, to Dixmont Hospital on Thursday of last week, died in that institution on Monday evening. A post mortem examination showed that his skull had been fractured in two places and the coroner of Allegheny county was called on who notified the dead man's friends and deputized Alderman McKenna to hold an inquest.

McClarren was about 45 years of age, a stout robust man and was by occupation an engineer. He has been insane for some time, but only recently was he considered dangerous. He was laboring under the impression that he was pursued by White caps, and when under that impression would run for miles to escape his imaginary enemies and was dangerous. He was brought here on May 3d, by the constable of Wilmore, and on Thursday of last week, taken to Dixmont by Sheriff Shumaker and Jail Warden Young.

The testimony taken before the coroner on Tuesday was as follows: Dr. N. S. Hutchinson was the first witness examined by the acting Coroner. The doctor said: "John McClarren, deceased, was sent here May 5, 1892, by the Court of Cambria. I was not present at the time he was received, but the next morning the nurse called me in and showed me a cut on McClarren's head which was V shaped. This cut was on his head when he was received at this institution. I called Dr. Graham in. The deceased was acutely insane. He was unable to tell me how he received his injury. He was in a state of shock, and he never rallied. He never regained consciousness or reason, and died at 5 P. M. on May 9, 1892. I told the nurses to take good care of him, and in case of death I would insist upon a post mortem examination, which I did, and found that he died from violence. Dr. Graham knows more about the case than any other person."

James T. McClarren, who lives at South Fork, Pa., and who is a cousin of the dead man, said: "The deceased was about 45 years old. He was a single man, and lived about Summerhill, Cambria county, Pa. I don't know anything about his injuries. I have seen him since his death."

Ed S. Kennedy, the Southside liquor man, testified to knowing John McClarren. He said: "I saw him on Sunday, May 1, 1892, at his home. He was flighty, but at times rational. He talked to me and told me he imagined White Caps were after him, and he jumped out through a window and took the sash with him. I noticed a slight cut on his head, and that is all I know of his death. I saw him before he was brought to Pittsburg. He had several cuts on his head."

Robert McGiffin said the deceased was put under his care about a week ago. He was all bruised and had cuts on his head. There was only one wound visible on his head, but black marks over his body.

A. N. Morrow, supervisor of the male department, said: "I received John McClarren and took him to the ward. I saw he had a large scar on his head and was marked on head and breast. There was no deep cuts, but on the top of his head, that I saw. I left him in charge of a nurse after seeing him sleeping. He was brought here on Thursday, May 5, 1892, by two men. I was told one of them was a Sheriff. One of them said they had a very hard fight with McClarren and that it took five men to handle him; that they had to beat him to bring him along and said he was a dangerous man. He did not say who beat him; simply 'we.' Both men were present when the statement was made, also Dr. Graham."

Dr. G. G. Graham testified: "I received this man Thursday, May 5, 1892, from the Sheriff of Cambria county. He said he knew nothing of the case except that the man had been very violent and he received an order from court to bring him here, and that he had jumped from the window and taken a sash with him and got up, shook the sash from him and ran away.

"He was again captured, and when he went to bring him here he was so bad that they had to knock him down with a club or stick to bring him along. I examined him and found a cut on his head. He died at 5 P. M. on May 9, and I sent for his friends, and when they arrived this morning I insisted on a post mortem examination, and they consented, and I opened the skull and found two fractures. I think that the injuries produced death. The injury on the top of the head was only superficial, as he got up and ran, but other injuries found were produced later. There was an inflamed condition of the brain, and a clot of blood. I examined the organs and found none unhealthy. The lungs were filled with air and there were no adhesions. The heart and lungs were normal. The injuries would be produced by a blunt instrument such as would not cut the scalp. The injury was received upon the opposite side from the laceration of brain tissue.

"I cannot see how the injuries or fracture I found could be caused by his fall or jump from the window as described at all, as the prominence of skull would receive the bruise first, and it did not in this case. I don't know the names of the parties who brought him. I would recognize the man who said he had to hit him with a club to bring him along, and thought at the time that the cut on the head was what he referred to, but my post mortem examination reveals the fact that he was beaten on the head by some blunt instrument. Two fractures show depression of skull. Where they struck him at I cannot say."

The inquest was continued until Saturday afternoon when witnesses from this county will be subpoenaed to appear.

On Wednesday we called on Jail Warden Young for information as to the condition of McClarren on his arrival at the jail, his treatment during his confinement and on the trip to Pittsburg. He said McClarren was brought to jail on Tuesday, and at the time of his arrival had the cut on his his head which was tied up with a handkerchief. There was but little trouble and no force required in getting him into the jail and cell, the Warden merely humoring him and talking kindly to him. On his being placed in the cell he was searched and freely gave up his knife, pocket-book and such other trifles as he had on his person. Sometime during Tuesday night he became violent, when Warden Young and two prisoners went into the cell and put a strait-jacket on McClarren and removed the iron bedstead from the cell for fear he would do himself injury. In putting on the strait-jacket they had to use some force but McClarren was not struck or injured whatever. The trip to Dixmont was made without any dangerous demonstrations on the part of McClarren, and he received and needed only kind treatment.

Sheriff Shumaker and Warden Young will appear at the investigation at Pittsburg on Saturday and will take with them Doctors Jones and Kennedy, of this place, who saw the cut on McClaren's head on his arrival, and also Conductor Snyder and some of the trainmen on the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad, who were witnesses to the kind treatment of McClarren on the trip.

The Pittsburg Dispatch of Thursday says: "The remains of John McClarren who died at Dixmont on Monday evening from the effects of a fractured skull were yesterday morning sent to his former home at Summerhill, Cambria county. The arrest of the Sheriff, of Cambria county has been ordered by the Coroner and District Attorney of Allegheny county. The arrest was ordered on the evidence offered at the Cornoner's inquest by Dr. Graham, Assistant Superintendent of Dixmont."

Spring Fever.

The gradual opening of the budding trees and the shooting upwards of the blades of grass are signs of the advent of spring. The farmer is already at work stimulating the growth of his crop by fertilizers to insure a rich harvest. Nature needs stimulation and why should not man? The system needs building up after the attacks of grippe and cold, and the only tonic is pure whiskey. Max Klein, of Allegheny, Pa., has the endorsement of eminent physicians, certifying to the purity of his famous Silver Age and Duquesne Rye Whiskies. Sold everywhere at $1.50 and $1.25 per full quart. Six-year-old Penna. Rye Whiskies, absolutely pure, at $1.00 per quart or six quarts for $5.00. Send for catalogue and price list of all kinds of liquors to Max Klein, 82 Federal street, Allegheny, Pa.

Miscellaneous Notices.

EBENSBURG MARBLE AND GRANITE Works, as sketched by a special reporter of the Johnstown Daily Herald.—Reliable dealers and fine goods.

"During a recent flying trip to Ebensburg the writer of this article visited the Marble and Granite Works of Jas. Wilkinson & Son, which were founded in 1880. The senior member of this progressive firm has had an experience of thirty-five years, and his son and partner is also a skilled worker. The class of work they produce is of the highest class and style. From four to five hands are employed and the very finest monuments in the county seat are specimens of their skill. Shipments are made through this and to adjoining counties.

"All kinds of cemetery work is executed and a fine line of Iron Railing is handled and sold. The stock of work kept on hand (received by the car-load) is very extensive and many very fine monuments are exhibited, two especially being executed in the rustic style and in imitation of brickwork, with a finely executed cross on the top. Among the many fine monuments erected by this firm is an eight-ton fifteen-feet-high monument for Sheriff Griffith, monument for Father Christy (sixteen feet high), also monuments for Jacob Kibler and daughter of John Griffith. Both gentlemen give personal attention to business as well as executing the finest work. In all the time they have been in business they have adhered strictly to the maxim all goods just as represented and prices as low as the same class of work can be bought elsewhere. We have no hesitancy in recommending Messrs. Wilkinson & Son to our readers as reliable business men, progressive and trustworthy. Visit their establishment before ordering elsewhere."

CHRONIC DISEASES OF EYES.
Such as Granulated Lids, Chronic Inflammation of the Lids, of the Iris, of the Choroid, of the Retina, Chronic Ulcerations, Spasms of the Lids and Eye, Tears running of the cheeks, Day and Night Blindness, Purulent or Mattering Sore Eyes, Gonorrheal Ophthalmia, Sympathetic Ophthalmia, Red Blotches or Brown ones on the Ball, White Spots on Eye, Glaucoma or Cupping of the Nerve, Amaurosis, Falling out of the Lashes, Sores, Redness of Edges of Lids and Eyes, and all other diseases to which the eye or its appendages are liable, positive and radical cure guaranteed.

A WORD ABOUT CATARRH.
It is the mucus membrane, that wonderful semi-fluid envelope surrounding the delicate tissues of the air and food passages, that Catarrh makes its stronghold. Once established it eats into the vitals and renders a life a long drawn breath of misery and disease, dulling the sense of hearing, trammeling the power of speech, destroying the faculty of smell, tainting the breath and killing the refined pleasures of taste. Insidiously, by creeping on from a simple cold in the head, it assaults the membraneous lining and and envelopes the bones, eating the delicate coats and causing inflammation, sloughing and death. Nothing short of total eradication will secure health to the patient, and all alleviatives are simply procrastinated sufferings, leading to a fatal termination. Even when the disease has made frightful inroads on delicate constitutions, hearing, smell and taste have been recovered and the disease thoroughly driven out.

CHRONIC DISEASES.
The doctors treat no acute diseases, but make an entire specialty of chronic and long standing diseases. Cases given up by other doctors and pronounced incurable, they most desire to see. The doctors have treated over four thousand cases in the last twelve years, many of which had been given up as incurable, some to be blind, others to be deaf, and a large number to be invalids for life. But behold, now they see and hear, and many are started on the right road to health and recovery every day.

The doctors are surrounded with the largest collection of fine instruments ever imported to this country for examining and treating all chronic diseases of the Head, Ear, Eye, Ear, Throat, Heart, Lungs, Stomach, Liver, Kidney, Bladder, Skin, Brain, and Nervous System, Cancers, Tumors, Piles, Swellings, Old Sores, Fits, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Gout, Sick Headache, Debility, Depression of Spirits, Diseases of Children, Hereditary Diseases, etc., etc., and in fact all long standing and Chronic Diseases.

RECTAL DISEASES.
They also make a specialty of all forms of Rectal Diseases, Piles—internal and external, itching and bleeding rectal ulcers, fissures, fistula—which are often taken for Cancerous and Lung Diseases, all cured if taken in time. Remember we cure all forms of Piles without pain, detention or interruption from business, and without the use of a knife, caustic, ligature, or injection. Come and be convinced. Dr. McClellan made these diseases a specialty for ten years in a large city.

Diseases of women, such as have baffled the skill of all physicians and remedies quickly cured. Cancers, tumors, fibroid and polypoid growths cured without the use of the knife or caustics. No cutting, no pain, no danger.

GHASTLY STORY OF A NECKLACE

The Grave of a Peruvian Princess Despoiled by American Officers.

The wife of a well-known naval officer, whose home is in Washington, wears about her throat a very beautiful gold necklace, the odd pattern of which has attracted much attention and excited much comment. A great many of her timid friends would be horrified, doubtless, if they knew that for perhaps a century that necklace had adorned the mummy of a Peruvian princess.

Some years ago, says the Philadelphia Press, while a vessel belonging to the United States navy was cruising off the coast of Peru, her officers organized an expedition to dig for mummies. "Inca hunting" has been for many years a favorite pastime in the American navy. Hardly a vessel has gone to the South Atlantic station whose officers have not organized a similar expedition, and many of the graves of the dead rulers of Peru have been opened and despoiled. The expedition which resulted in the discovery of the necklace was most fruitful. Not one, but a dozen graves were found.

In the center was the grave of one who had evidently been a princess, and buried about her in a circle were the remains of those who had been her attendants. The mummy of the princess was in a sitting posture. All of the others were doubled up in the same way, but, while the attitude of the central figure wore the calm aspect of death, the others expressed the most hopeless despair. They had evidently been buried alive and some were in the attitude of tearing their hair or rending their garments. Only the central figure was adorned with ornaments, and chief among these was a necklace of gold beads. One of the officers in the party coveted the necklace, and under an arrangement with the other members of the expedition he became proprietor of it and brought it home to his wife. Another officer brought home a mummied arm, and there are many other ghastly relics of that voyage now decorating the walls of smoking-rooms and libraries in Washington.

DEPRAVITY OF THE SPARROW.

Recent Discoveries Prove Him as Black as He is Painted.

Henceforth let no one apologize for the English sparrow, says the New York Advertiser. He is as black as he he has been painted, and considerably more so.

The news from North Plain, Conn., virtually strips him of every feather of respectability and leaves him naked to the scorn of the world. The Baptist church at North Plain has been robbed at various times of sums aggregating fifty-two dollars, and after three years of bickering, charges and counter-charges, the stolen money has been traced to a couple of English sparrows that had a nest in a vine near the church. The evidence against the sparrows is indisputable, as the missing money, in bills ranging from one dollar to five dollars, has been found woven into their nest.

With the discovery of this money peace is restored in a church which has been rent and torn since the thefts were first discovered. The money was always missed out of the sums turned in by the deacons who took up the collections, circumstances sometimes pointing to one deacon as the thief and sometimes to another. At one time the minister was believed to have been caught "dead to rights," and when a deacon flatly charged him with being "a sneak-thief," he left the church and did not enter it again.

Two deacons came to blows over these mysterious disappearances, and during these three long and terrible years suspicion was continually poisoning each brother's cup—and all because of a thievish propensity of an English sparrow which took advantage of an open window to fly into the church and nip an occasional bank note.

Therefore, on top of his other meannesses, it is here boldly charged that the English sparrow is a thief so steeped in wickedness that he does not hesitate to rob a Connecticut church.

THE CHINESE NAVY.

Although Seldom Heard of, It Is Quite Powerful.

The Chinese navy is never heard of much because it has little to do, says the Washington Post. China's troubles are mostly inland and with herself. She is not much in the habit of courting difficulties with outside powers, but she may have use for her fleet some day. It consists of North Coast squadron, the Foochow squadron, and several flotillas for river and coast operations.

Among the ships of the North Coast squadron are two barbette sea-going armor-clads of 7,280 tons each, one of 9,850 tons and one of 2,320 tons; one turret ship of 2,320 tons, two deck-protected cruisers, each of 2,300 tons, and a large number of torpedo vessels. The Foochow squadron consists of nine cruisers, ranging from 1,300 to 2,480 tons, three gunboats, nine dispatch boats, and three revenue cruisers, while the Shanghai flotilla boasts an armored frigate of 2,630 tons.

This is at least the nucleus of a tolerably effective navy. It is run for the present on the mind-your-own-business principle, but how long the Chinese government will be permitted to adhere to this conservative policy is uncertain. A naval demonstration of its own may sooner or later become necessary to resist English encroachment and French or German spoliation. The necessity for such a demonstration in front of San Francisco is something that the United States, if it be wise, will not encourage.

DOINGS AT A DISTANCE.

DENMARK as well as Germany has established a system of pensions for superannuated workmen.

THE sultan has prohibited Turkish women from wearing French costumes in the streets of Constantinople.

READING, Eng., is known as Biscuitopolis, because of the location there of George Palmer's big biscuit factory in which five thousand persons are employed.

HORSE flesh seems to be at a discount in New Zealand. Recently at Waipawa, Hawke's Bay, a bunch of twenty-nine horses, mostly young and unbroken, only realized two hundred dollars, some of the animals being knocked down at about two dollars each.

Breath.

The following composition by a twelve-year-old schoolboy was the cause of his being recommended to take a special course in physiology the next term. The theme given him was "Breath:"

Breath is made of air. We breathe always with our lungs, and sometimes with our livers, except at night, when our breath keeps life going through our noses while we are asleep. If it wasn't for our breath we should die whenever we slept.

Boys that stay in a room all day should not breathe; they should wait till they get outdoors. For a lot of boys staying in a room make carbonicide. And carbonicide is more poisonous than mad dogs, though not just the same way. It does not bite, but that's no matter as long as it kills you.—Youth's Companion.

"NO MORE DOCTORS FOR ME!

They said I was consumptive, sent me to Florida, told me to keep quiet, no excitement, and no tennis. Just think of it. One day I found a little book called 'Guide to Health,' by Mrs. Pinkham, and in it I found out what ailed me. So I wrote to her, got a lovely reply, told me just what to do, and I am in splendid health now."

60 CHESTER PL., BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 19, '90.

For over twelve years my son has been afflicted with spasms; he would have one every two weeks until about six months ago, then even two a week. We took him to a number of first-class physicians and we tried everything and any number of remedies without deriving any encouragement in his case, and had commenced to despair of ever being able to cure him at all, when we heard of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and concluded to give it a trial. The result has more than satisfied us! It is more than three months since he commenced to take this Nerve Tonic and he has never been sick since. Please accept our most sincere thanks, for we feel that you have not only cured him of a great affliction but have saved his life as well, as we do not think he would have lived long in the condition he was in before he commenced taking your valuable remedy.

HE Missed his Opportunity! DON'T Miss Yours, Reader. The majority neglect their opportunities, and from that cause live in poverty and die in obscurity! Harrowing despair is the lot of many, as they look back on lost, forever lost, opportunity. Life is passing! Reach out. Be up and doing. Improve your opportunity, and secure prosperity, prominence, peace. It was said by a philosopher, that "the Goddess of Fortune offers a golden opportunity to each person at some period of life; embrace the chance, and she pours out her riches; fail to do so and she departs, never to return." How shall you find the GOLDEN opportunity? Investigate every chance that appears worthy, and of fair promise; that is what all successful men do. Here is an opportunity, such as is not often within the reach of laboring people. Improved, it will give, at least, a grand start in life. The GOLDEN opportunity for many is here. Money to be made rapidly and honorably by any industrious person of either sex. All ages. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 per day. You can do as well if you will work, not too hard, but industriously; and you can increase your income as you go on. You can give spare time only, or all your time to the work. Easy to learn. Capital not required. We start you. All is comparatively new and really wonderful. We instruct and show you how, free. ABOUT TEA AND COFFEE.

A Wholesale Grocer Tells How the American Public Is Duped.

Do you like a cup of good coffee? And again, how often do you get one? The most frequently called for brand of coffee at the grocer's is Java, but a good second place is held by Mocha. A wholesale grocer, in conversation with a New York Mail and Express man the other day, spoke of this demand and disclosed a few facts which are not generally known by the coffee-drinking public.

"People are continually calling at the grocer's for Mocha coffee," he said, "and many will take no other. As a matter of fact there are probably not five hundred people in the United States who have ever tasted real Mocha, and I do not believe that there is a single pound of it to be found between the Atlantic and the Pacific. The Arabs, of Arabia, not those of Africa, are the most fastidious coffee-drinkers in the world, and the crop of Mocha is not large. The governors and shieks get the pick, the finest and plumpest berries being chosen for them. The rich Arabs get the second choice. The rest is sold throughout the country, and a very little, consisting of the shriveled and broken berries, finds its way to Constantinople. Not a hundred weight a year gets west of that city."

What is called Mocha consists of inferior Arabian growths, at least, a little of it does. Americans never see the best tea. None of the finest growth ever leaves China, and the best of the export goes overland to Russia, being known as "caravan tea." Some of this retails as high as fifty dollars a pound. True caravan tea is never brought to this country, as it is believed that a sea voyage affects its flavor. Some of the Ceylon tea ranks as high as the best Chinese growth. A pound of what is known as "golden tip," grown on a famous estate in Ceylon, was recently sold in London for one hundred and thirty-five dollars.

MECHANICAL INGENUITY.

A Novel Device for Cooking Eggs Hard or Soft.

An ingenious little European device for cooking eggs is made in the shape of a box which contains a tin drum hermetically sealed and filled with a fluid that does not change, says the Jewelers' Weekly. The drum, hung upon its axis, describes a semicircle to the right. The balls that belong to the mechanism are placed in corresponding openings and from these are passed into a cup-shaped cavity on the outer surface of the drum. The fluid contained in the latter prevents the drum from turning too rapidly, and it flows very slowly from one to the other of the various peculiarly-connected chambers.

By throwing the ball into the deeper or shallower of the cups the time for the rotation is regulated. When these cavities reach the ball drops out on a bell underneath. After the signal has been given the ball rolls back to its original cup and the mechanism adjusts itself anew. When the machine is to be used again the lever shown on the side of the box is turned for a moment to the left.

Both hard and soft boiled eggs can be cooked by this ingenious regulator. It is very easily manipulated. As soon as the eggs have been put into the boiling water one of the little balls which come with every machine is thrown into one of the openings on top. The openings are marked "soft" or "hard." The eggs will have boiled the proper length of time when the bell gives the signal.

A HEROIC CANINE.

He Saved His Master and Mistress from a Horrible Death.

I once knew a little fox terrier of marvelous intelligence—his mistress' pet. I have seen him, when he was impatient to go out a walking, suddenly appear with her boots in his mouth, which he would throw down at her feet. Could there be a better hint or could language convey more? asks the Gentleman's Magazine. Told "to fetch sticks" he would rush into a flower bed and pull up a stick or two to which the flowers were trained and return with them. I have even seen a dog who sung or made sounds like singing when he was sung to.

Out at Camberwell in a shop window I saw a little white stuffed dog on a stand with an inscription below. It was to the effect that this dog, at a fire at Luton on November 10, 1883, ran up and awoke his master and mistress (grocers named Perry) by licking their faces. They were saved, but it would seem in their alarm forgot their preserver.

A fireman went up and recovered him, but the faithful creature was so burned that he died in a few minutes.

Bad for the Papers.

One of the disadvantages of dating a publication in advance of the time of issuing it has been brought to the front in England. A weekly illustrated newspaper, in an article on Cardinal Manning, commended to his notice a philanthropic object which he might help, though on the date which the paper bore the cardinal's body was lying in state at his home, where he had died two days before. Another paper dated two days after the death of the duke of Clarence made no mention of his death, but devoted several articles to the subject of his expected marriage. Punch on one occasion made a flippant allusion to an eminent statesman who figured in its pages often, and who had died three days previous to the date borne by the paper. Whatever advantages there may be in this practice, it would seem that the results in the above instances were rather stupid.

SOME FUNNY THINGS.

"YOU say your son John went down south and started a newspaper?" "Yes." "Is he making himself felt in the community?" "You bet he is. He has been tarred and feathered twice."

FANGLE—"I have just patented the greatest invention of the century." Cumso—"What is it?" Fangle—"A collar button which does its own swearing when it rolls under the bureau."—Epoch.

"WHAT are you going to do with your new skates, Johnny?" asked the caller. "I haven't made up my mind yet," was the reply, "but I think I'll get sister to tie ribbons on 'em and fix 'em with gold paint to hang in the parlor."—Washington Star.

"YOU are another poor victim of circumstances, I presume," said the charitable housekeeper. "No'm," replied Mr. Hungry Higgins proudly, "I ain't. I'm a self-made man, I am, even if it ain't much of a job."—Indianapolis Journal.

DEUCED AWKWARD.—Cholly Van Wyck—"D'ye heah that Albaht Victaw was going to be mawwied?" Awthaw de Gough—"Ya-as. Doosid glawd it ain't his fawthaw. It would be jolly awkward, doncherknow, to have to mawway."—New York Herald.

THE CAREFUL WIFE.—Wife—"Why don't you eat your pudding?" Husband—"I'm afraid the pudding will put my stomach out of order." Wife—"Well, suppose it does. That's better than throwing it into the slop barrel. Have some more?"—Texas Siftings.

—Dr. Bumps (a phrenologist)—"This boy, ma'am, will never die in state's prison." Mrs. Gimlet—"I'm sure we ought to be thankful for that." Dr. Bumps—"Yes; the bump of longevity is highly developed; he will live to serve out his time."—Truth.

WHY IS THE

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN

THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY?

It is a seamless shoe, with no tacks or wax thread to hurt the feet; made of the best fine calf, stylish and easy, and because we make more shoes of this grade than any other manufacturer, it equals hand-sewed shoes costing from $4.00 to $5.00.

$5.00 Genuine Hand-sewed, the finest calf shoe ever offered for $5.00; equals French imported shoes which cost from $8.00 to $12.00.

$4.00 Hand-Sewed Welt Shoe, fine calf, stylish, comfortable and durable. The best shoe ever offered at this price; same grade as custom-made shoes costing from $6.00 to $9.00.

$3.50 Police Shoe; Farmers, Railroad Men and Letter Carriers all wear them; fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, heavy three soles, extension edge. One pair will wear a year.

$2.50 fine calf; no better shoe ever offered at this price; one trial will convince those who want a shoe for comfort and service.

SOME NOTED BEDS.

Luxurious Couches on Which Vast Fortunes Were Lavished.

To Dr. Graham, a Scotchman who practiced medicine in London in the latter part of the eighteenth century, must be credited the invention of a most extraordinary bed [illegible] says the Upholsterer. It [illegible] carved and gilded, [illegible] French, supported on [illegible] glass pillars and surmounted by a canopy from which fell [illegible] crimson silk. Graham [illegible] married couples who [illegible] [illegible] to be [illegible] night in this bed, a [illegible] he charged one hundred [illegible]

METHODS OF FOOTPADS.

They Usually Work Together in Companies of Three.

"In former days the footpad [illegible] wayman considered [illegible] longer billy," said Chief [illegible] Desmond, in the St. Louis [illegible] crat. "Armed with this weapon [illegible] footpad would lay in wait in [illegible] alley, pick out a belated [illegible] as he came by, step noiselessly [illegible] hind him. A sharp blow on [illegible] settled matters, and the robber [illegible] search his victim at his [illegible] handling was too unhandy to [illegible] it often led to the capture of [illegible] criminals.

"Nowadays footpads travel [illegible] They will walk up the street [illegible] and a victim is selected [illegible] along. The garroters will [illegible] front of him until a dark [illegible] reached, and then purposely [illegible] room for him to pass. The [illegible] will in nine cases out of ten [illegible] bait and attempt to hurry by. [illegible] does so the smallest of the [illegible] throws his arms around the [illegible] throat and force him backward [illegible] second man will deliver a quick [illegible] in the stomach, which settles [illegible] eler, and the third man does the [illegible] ing. So quickly is the work done [illegible] the victim seldom gets time to get a [illegible] scription of his assailants."

UNREQUITED AFFECTION.

The Unromantic Culmination of a One-Sided Love Story.

They are telling a story on a young man in Detroit, which somehow has only recently got into the current gossip.

It appears that during the past summer he put in a month at a lake resort in the northwest, and there fell in love with a girl who didn't believe his propriety worth a cent. His persistence, however, was in no wise abated by a little thing like that, adds the Free Press. One day the girl fell off the dock into the lake, and the young man being somewhat of an athlete and a swimmer, jumped in and rescued her without much difficulty.

"Now," he said, as she stood dripping on the dock, "I have saved your life and you must marry me."

"Marry you?" she repeated, in bewilderment. "Must I?"

"It's as little as you could do," he whispered, putting out his hands to her.

She gave him one look as he stood there all draggled and sloppy and with a smothered shriek she plunged into the flood once more.

The next time she was rescued by a boy in a boat, and the young man [illegible] so mad he sent a bill to her father for a new suit of clothes.

COLOR OF GOLD.

It Depends on the Location Where the Precious Metal Is Found.

"Most people suppose," says an assayer, "that all gold is alike when refined, but this is not the case. An experienced man can tell at a glance about what part of the world a gold piece comes, and in some cases from what part of a particular gold district the metal was obtained.

"The Australian gold, for instance, is distinctly redder than the Californian, and this difference in color is plainly perceptible, even when the gold is 1,000 thousand fine.

"Again, the gold obtained from placers is yellower than that which is taken directly from quartz. Why this should be the case is one of the mysteries of metallurgy, for the placer gold all comes from the veins. The Ural gold is the reddest found anywhere.

"Few people know the real color of gold, as it is seldom seen unless heavily alloyed, which renders it [illegible] than when pure. The purest [illegible] ever made were the fifty-dollar pieces [illegible] used to be common in California.

"Their coinage was abandoned for two reasons; first, because the loss by abrasion was so great, and second, because the interior could be bored out and lead substituted, the difference in weight being too small to be readily noticed in so large a piece. These octagon coins were the most valuable ever struck."

—First Medic—"How did the operation go off?" Second Medic—"Splendidly. It was like a carbuncle in two ways." F. M.—"How so?" S. M.—"Why, in the first place, it was a great gathering, and secondly, it was a [illegible] affair."
